GORHAM HIGH SCHOOL
GORHAM, MAINE
VOLUME XLIV

The Class of 1984 takes great pleasure in dedicating Schola 84' to a great friend and fine teacher, Mr. Edward Willett.

Mr. Willett has brought smiles to five years of junior English classes at Gorham High. His compassion, love of independent thinking, and humor were extended this year to seniors in Shakespeare, World Literature, and Latin. All that he has taught fondly remember his friendly smile and the mischievous look in his eyes.

The Class of 1984 thanks you, Mr. Willett, for all you have done. We can only hope that we have enriched your life as much as you have ours.

Sincerely yours,
The Class of 1984

Windows

Why me? I mean why do I
Always feel I'm in a room of windows
With no walls to hold me, but I cannot get out?
I can see out of my room of windows,
But it seems no one can see me.
Or if they do, I cannot hear them.
So someone please break the windows
That bind me and let me into your world.

SCHOLA SCHOLA SCHOLA

Schola is Gorham High School's yearbook. Each year students produce a book to capture memories of their high school years. Much effort is put forth in the form of fund raising (ad drive, candy sales, and this year a concert) and page designing. Mr. Arruda is Schola's new advisor and Robert Dudley is editor.

NATIONAL HONOR SOCIETY

The National Honor Society, under the guidance of Mrs. Davis, honors students who have shown excellence in scholarship, leadership, service, and character. Two activities which the N.H.S. has been sponsoring for several years are the Christmas Candy Cane Sale and the Valentine Carnation Sale. As well as being money raisers, the two activities are designed to promote care and consideration for others in the school. Each year, the National Honor Society presents scholarships to honor deserving students. The major goal of the N.H.S. is to encourage thoughtfulness among the students of Gorham High School.

LEOS      LEOS      LEOS      LEOS      LEOS

The Gorham High School Leo's Club is sponsored by the Lions Club of Gorham. Its purpose is to promote service activities among youth of the community, which will develop the individual qualities of leadership, experience, and opportunity. Its objectives are to provide youths an opportunity for development and contribution, individually or collectively, as responsible members of the local, national, and international community. Also, the club tries to provide services to the school and community.

Last year this club participated in many projects for the school and community. The members were rewarded for their work, for they received an award for being the most outstanding Leo's Club in their district.

Among the numerous activities completed this year are: organizing and supervising a community blood drive; assisting a Lions Club Auction; visiting and planning special programs for the Gorham Manor during both Thanksgiving and Christmas; raising money for the Bruce Roberts Christmas Fund; Sending Christmas cards Marined in Lebanon; and preparing food baskets for needy families. They also maintained a year-long project of collecting returnable bottles and depositing them on a weekly basis. Besides other spring projects, the club awards local college scholarships.

STUDENT COUNCIL STUDENT COU

The Student Council is a governing organization which represents the students and serves as a liaison group between the students and the administration. This year the council has played an active role in improving student-faculty relations as well as school-community relations. It has sponsored several school activities, including the fall festival, winter carnival, community day, and various assemblies, spirit weeks, and rallies throughout the year. With the guidance of Mr. A. Lichtenstein, its advisor, the student council has had a productive year.

CHORUS CHORUS CHORUS CH

The High School Chorale is a very active performing ensemble that continues to improve with each concert. The Chorale for the last three years has been awarded a superior rating at the State Large Ensemble Festival. This year the Chorale performed at Christmas concert, a Mid-Winter concert with USM, had an exchange with Schenck High School, at the Large Ensemble Festival, and the Pops concert.

CONCERT CHOIR

The Concert Choir has a tradition of excellence in the performance of all styles of music and has annually received superior ratings at both the State Solo and Ensemble Festival and Large Ensemble Festival. In addition to the choir's concert tour to Washington, D.C. in 1982 and a concert performance at the 1983 Maine Music Educators Association's In-Service Conference, they perform an active concert schedule in the Greater Portland Area.

The Concert Choir of Gorham High School was formed in 1979 under the guidance of its present conductor, Joseph D. Henry.

The purpose of developing an auditioned choir was to provide the truly talented, interested and dedicated student the opportunity to perform a calibre of music not attainable in a general group. The students in the Concert Choir quickly realize that music is a discipline and that one must give of himself totally in terms of talent, practice and hard work.

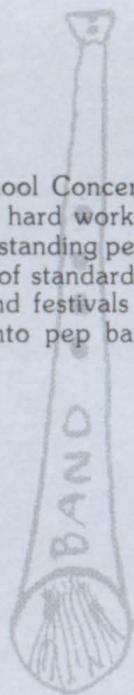

The Concert Choir meets every Monday evening and Wednesday afternoon for a two hour rehearsal. Extra rehearsals are scheduled in the spring as the Choir prepares an annual choreographed show. The Concert Choir is choreographed by Ms. Dory Bridges, instructor of dance at the Virginia Dorr School of Dance in Gorham.

RENCH CLUB FRENCH CLUB F

The French Club's main goal this year is to reimburse the school for the money they lent us in going to Quebec last year. Through our annual poster sale, along with other fund raising activities, we have decreased our debt. This year over April vacation, we are going to Montreal with the French club from Thornton Academy. Our officers this year are as follows: president --- Mike Bellafontaine, vice-president --- Brian Weimer, treasurer --- Julie Dennis and secretary --- Mary Farrell. Our Advisor this year is Mr. Fournier.

A TRIP TO POLLIWOG POND

It was early afternoon when my two sisters, Mary and Diana, accompanied me on an expedition to Polliwog Pond. It was only down the road a short ways, but to a five year old that was quite a long walk. The sun beat down on us. Birds fluttered and sang above as we walked along, kicking pebbles in front of us.

When we got to the pond, we scrambled down the embankment trying not to scare away any frogs which might be around. We lay on our stomachs and stared into the pond. The long grass hid us from any passing cars. As we looked we became overgrown with grass and pond scum. Only one small area of water was left for the polliwogs to live in, and that was right in front of the drainage pipe.

An idea was formed. One of us would run back to the house to get a bucket and a jar to catch the polliwogs. Then we would carry them across the road to the stream on the other side which was full of nice, fresh, clear water. After much discussion Mary ran off to find our materials. Upon her return, we set to work catching the polliwogs. The only sound to be heard was the dunking of the jar and then the splash as the polliwogs were dumped into the bucket. After we were through catching as many as we could, we all peered into the bucket excitedly talking to the polliwogs, telling them how happy they would be in their new home.

By this time we were drenched with water and eager to finish our task. Diana decided to go across the road and wait for us to bring the bucket of polliwogs. Mary and I scrambled up the embankment and started across the road. I proudly carried the bucket and smiled to myself as I thought of how smart we were to save the polliwogs.

Then we heard a terrified scream. Diana had screamed and was now shouting "a mole, a mole!" I dropped the bucket of polliwogs and we all ran back up the road toward our house. We stopped half way, our hearts pounding while we gasped for air. And then I asked the question which had been going through my mind. "What's a mole?" I was thoroughly disappointed when I found out it wasn't a monster but a little mouse. Mary and I marched bravely back to finish the project we had started. But when we got there, we found to our horror the polliwogs fried on the hot pavement of the road. We just stood around the dead polliwogs and cried. I felt worse because I had been the one holding the bucket. After a while we picked up our equipment and slowly walked home.

CABINS AND TREEHOUSES

When we were young, my friend David and I had a fascination with building treehouses. Our best and largest was in my backyard. There were six floors, four of which had walls. The middle two floors were used as a lookout. On the bottom floor we kept a cooler and a cupboard for necessities such as food, soda, dirtbike magazines, and baseball gloves.

We slept on the top floor, which was furnished with two sleeping bags and a battery-powered television set. We never got around to furnishing any of the other floors.

This treehouse lasted for about four years. After it started to look rundown, my mother ordered us to tear it down. This was easier said than done. We put it off as long as possible, but we eventually decided it was time to get rid of the place. It actually only took us one day to destroy it.

We progressed on to better things. We built a log cabin all by ourselves, which was a large accomplishment for us. This cabin was built of pine logs and salvaged plywood.

The logs were easy to get, but the plywood was a totally different story. We would sneak into a junkyard just after closing time and dodge dogs to get this precious material.

The outside was nothing spectacular to look at. All of the logs had a three-to-four inch space between them. The inside was furnished the same as any other house. We had the same little television set, wall-to-wall carpeting, benches, and a table. It's a wonder the place didn't fall down after all of the beatings it took. One time, for instance, David's neighbor Rick, who is very big, came over and jumped on the roof.

It was only last summer when David's father took his chain saw out into the cabin and cut it into little tiny pieces of firewood. Luckily he did this while we weren't home. When we got home David and I were so stunned that we didn't say a single word for the rest of the day.

As far as I know our cabin-building days are over.

TURNING THE PAGE

As our old Chevy wagon turned into my grandparents' narrow dirt driveway leading to their newly purchased retirement home, I couldn't help but allow my eyes to wander off farther along the drive to rest on Mim and Da's ancient lifetime home as it stood on its little hill. The little wooden, yellow and brown For Sale sign caught my gaze and reminded me that this family heirloom no longer belonged to us. Although the sign was small, I found it hard to look past it and appreciate the beauty of what had once been a beautiful late 1700's mansion, but was now a mere shadow of its previous condition.

My grandparents' once-stately home loomed sadly before me as it stood in its peeling painted finish and its faded forest-green trim. Ignored grounds surrounded it on all sides. The once freshly-painted red barn now slumped to one side, as if ashamed of its pale pink chipped coat.

Now uncut grass and broken fences replaced Da's carefully trimmed lawns which led to acres of fields, meadows, woods, and ponds.

The whole area had once been alive with the sound of laughter and the feeling of family togetherness. Walls buzzed from all the activity of Mom and Mimi baking in the kitchen, Dad practicing his golf swing on the side lawn, Da caring for his treasured racing horses, and Beth and I hopping through the sprinkler on hot summer afternoons.

Memories of special times lurked in every corner of the house. Memories of childhood summers, weekends, and holidays hung in the stillness of the air. The special times shared within the walls of this old friend would never be forgotten, especially the carefree summer days, or the long awaited Christmas mornings when the whole family gathered together to celebrate the Christmas season.

Every year at Christmas time, Mom, Dad, my sister Beth, the dog, and I squeezed into our car to rush to Pemaquid for the festive holidays. Almost as soon as we turned onto the dusty driveway, we could smell all the delicious treats which Mimi had spent days preparing for family, friends, and neighbors. Mimi's warm gingerbread men with red cinnamon buttons topped my list of favorite treats, along with her famous fruit cakes.

Still seated in the back seat of our car, I expected to smell the sweet aroma from Mimi's baking once again, but I was sadly disappointed as I awoke from my dreary thoughts to find that we had taken a left into Mimi's and Da's new home instead of continuing straight to their previous home where I had spent the happiest times of my childhood. Not only were we not at the old farm, but I was no longer a child and it wasn't even Christmas. I was merely a young adult visiting my grandparents for a warm Sunday in May. I felt as if I had just finished a chapter in my life. This particular chapter was hard to let go, but after brushing away the stray tear trickling down my burning cheek, I decided that I must get on with my story and turn the page.

IF ONLY

It was just how I had pictured a funeral parlor: A long hallway which led to a dimly lit room with folding chairs set up in rows and soft eerie music playing. My brother and I walked hesitantly into the room to kneel in front of the casket. The room felt empty. Was it the emptiness inside myself I felt? The strong aching in my stomach lingered as we paid our last respects to the cold body which lay before us. The casket was decorated with bouquets and many different arrangements of flowers. They were so bright and beautiful yet so ugly.

It was hard to believe she was dead. She didn't look dead. Her hair looked as if she had just taken out her rollers, and I could still see faint pink lines in her cheeks. She looked as if she were sleeping peacefully. I had watched my grandmother many times before sleeping in her chair with her little dog, Sam, cuddled up in her lap. I had walked silently into the room one night only to see her eyes open wide as I passed her. "Just waiting for you to watch 'Saturday Night Live' with me," she had said with a sleepy smile. Now she would be asleep forever.

As I stared at her body, I kept telling myself to remember her when she was alive and happy, but the thought of her lying dead on her kitchen floor kept flashing into my mind. How could she have been dead and alone for two days before anyone found her? My uncle, over just for a visit, found her lying against the stove staring at him with Sam whimpering at her side. She had been cooking and must have just collapsed. She always did enjoy cooking. Especially when all the family was there and she has a chance to cook a big dinner.

I only wish that she hadn't died alone. If only someone had been there with her. If only her doctor had checked to see if her flu was better. If only the neighbors had called her when she didn't leave home for two days. If only her best friend at the nursing home, knowing that she had never missed work without calling, had checked on her. If only my mom and I had been up for a visit that week. If only

YESTERDAY, TODAY, TOMORROW

Before I begin, I think that I should tell you that I have not lived in Gorham all my life, only for about five years. I used to live in Caribou, a place about fifteen miles from the Canadian border.

I went back this past summer. I went with one state of mind and returned with another. Even now, I look back on that visit with a twinge of regret.

The kids on the block considered the neighborhood our territory especially a certain small patch of woods. It was a relatively small area wooded with poplar trees and covered with brush. Those woods were our ticket to fantasy, to adventure, to battle, and to so much more. Imagination ran rampant. When the older kids of the neighborhood used to try to tear down our cabins, built with scrounged up nails and old boards, we would defend them with a ferocious tenacity. A phone call from a parent would quickly remedy the situation for at least another day. Those woods meant so much to us, so much to me.

The scruffy cabins we constructed were our pride and joy. The wind blew them down and any slight amount of snow would cause them to collapse. This never deterred us; we would just rebuild once again. Dad would always be helpful, contributing well-meaning advice and much of his spare time to rebuild those rickety cabins.

The woods were our planet, one discovered after landing our spaceship, usually the family picnic table. It was inhabited by aliens, those unlucky ones chosen beforehand, and violent beasts-the neighbors twenty cats!

The woods teemed with adventure. The winding paths led us to the alien king's palace, where a bloody mock battle resulted. We, the explorers, always won.

Those woods were our uninhabited island, our deep northern forests; they were subjected to anything our childish minds could concoct.

Aside from play, we learned to work with one another. Arguments and fights were few and far between. Well, they're gone. I returned to what was once home, and found a special piece of me was missing.

At the age of seventeen, one would expect a mature outlook on this situation. I'm not afraid to admit I cried. I was hurt. All that remained was a bittersweet memory of my childhood. Maybe it was the realization that I am growing older that made me upset. Sometimes, I wish I had never found out that the woods had been cleared. It might have been all for the better.

THE DOWN-TO-EARTH WOMAN

It has been quite some time since we found out Granny has Alzheimer's Disease. I still remember the day it was confirmed. Granny would soon lose her personality and would forget everything life had taught her. She would even forget the people she lived with; her brain would slowly die.

It was on a bright Saturday morning when I went downstairs to check the mail and found only one lonely letter. It was from Aunt Carol in Tennessee and was addressed to the family, so I opened it. I noticed her return address was smudged as well as our address. The letter was here, it had found its place, so I guess it did not matter. When I opened the letter and read it, I could not believe my eyes. Granny was going to die from some horrible disease. I quickly ran to the hospital, about one block away, where my mother works. With a tear-stained face I asked to see my mother. I was standing at the main desk when she came out of a patients room. She took one look at me and saw I was clutching a letter. She took it and read it. Her face changed quickly. After all, it was her mother who would soon die.

The next thing I knew, a few months later but what seemed to be only hours later, I was alone on a bus headed for Tennessee. I sat on the bus for 24 hours in a daze. Inside I was crying, as I knew Mom was at home doing the same. She couldn't come because she couldn't get enough time off.

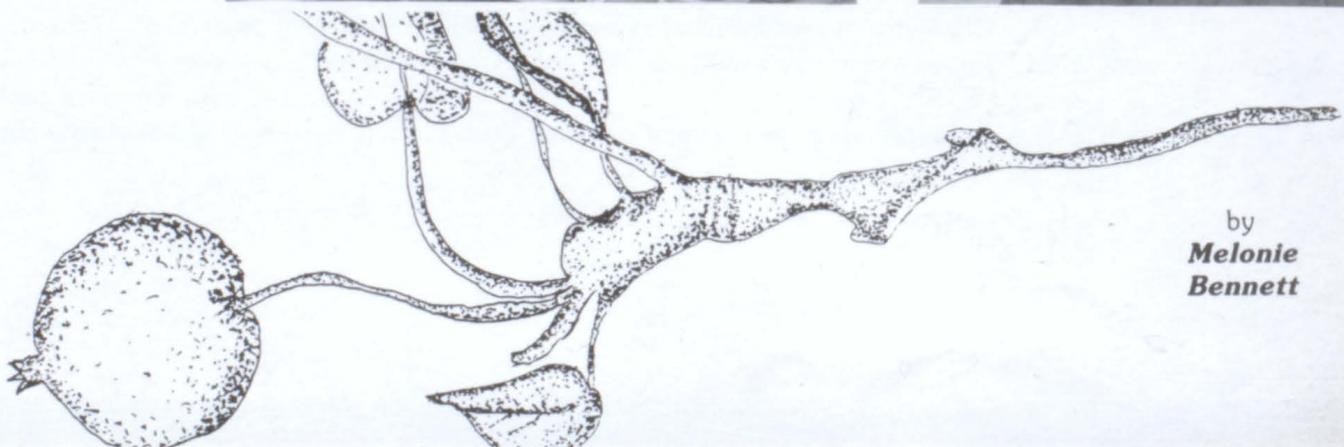

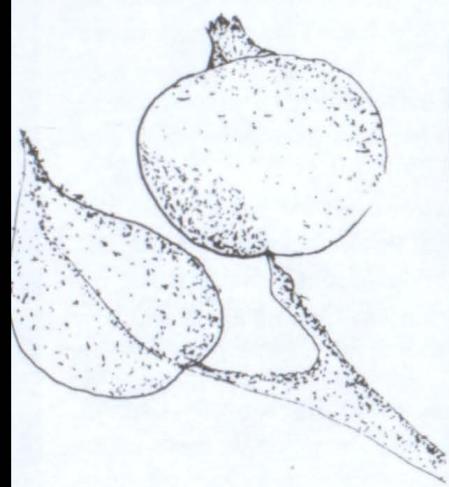

My Uncle John was waiting when I arrived. I begged and pleaded for him to take me to see Granny. He thought it would be better if I waited awhile. They just could not understand: I had to see her before she got worse. Why hadn't I written or called her more often? All of my thoughts were jumbled and the worst thing was, I couldn't cry.

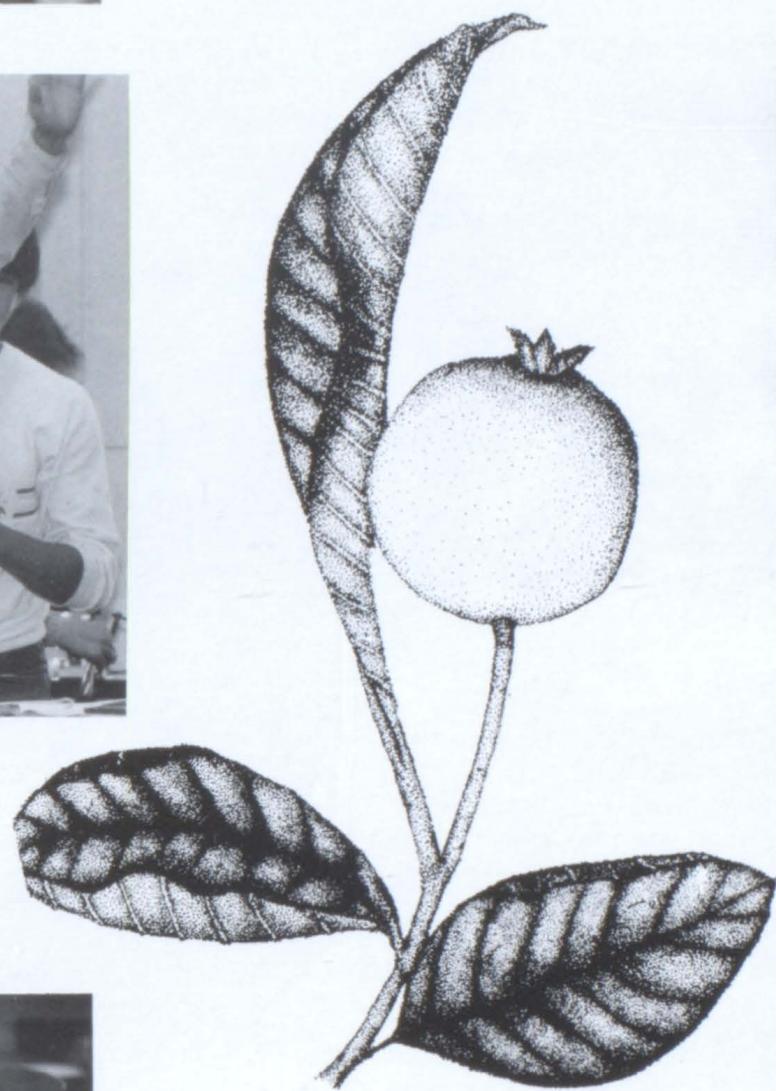

I finally saw my grandmother. She acted like a five-year-old child. She even had to be tied with bed sheets to a wheel chair. If she were allowed to walk, she would circle her room for hours. I didn't try to talk to her: I know her ability to understand was gone. She could barely even say yes or no to a simple question.

As I stood there I remembered when she came to Maine for the first time. It was a strange environment for her because she was from the "slow" South. My best friend and I one day took her down to the corner store. She got lost because we had run off on her. When we got home we all had a big laugh. Now I wonder if that was the beginning of her progressive disease.

When I got home, to Maine, I was lost inside myself and withdrawn. I thought of how I would never see Granny again and how I would handle it when she found her permanent bed. That is the last step of life from which there is no returning, ever for a down-to-earth woman who happens to be my granny.

MY ENGLISH CLASSROOM

The first things I'm confronted with when I walk into English class are five rows of empty desks. Their chairs are amiss, waiting for people to plop into them.

The front of the room is guarded with two green chalkboards. The trim around one is a type of metal and the other is trimmed with inexpensive plywood. I don't know why they don't match, but the difference makes them more individualistic.

To the left of the room are piles of books. A weird instrument is bolted to the wall. It has a rotating disc with holes of varying sizes. There is also a crank which must serve a useful purpose.

The paneling on the walls looks as if it is in agony. Grotesque shapes can be seen with stretched out eyes and gaping mouths. The color of the paneling is varying shades of brown with flowing lines of black in the grain.

In the right hand corner of the room is an ugly brown filing cabinet that waits with a sliding mouth for deposits of creative papers. I feel it as often as necessary. My favorite poster is also in the right corner and its statement is "I'm allergic to homework!"

TENNIS, ANYONE?

I've often wondered how anyone could be afraid of something as small and harmless as a bat. Let me tell you, they may be small but they are anything but harmless.

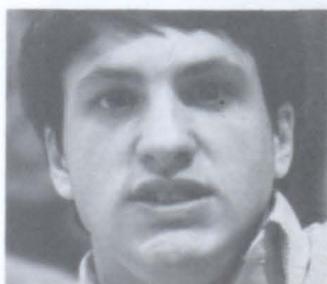

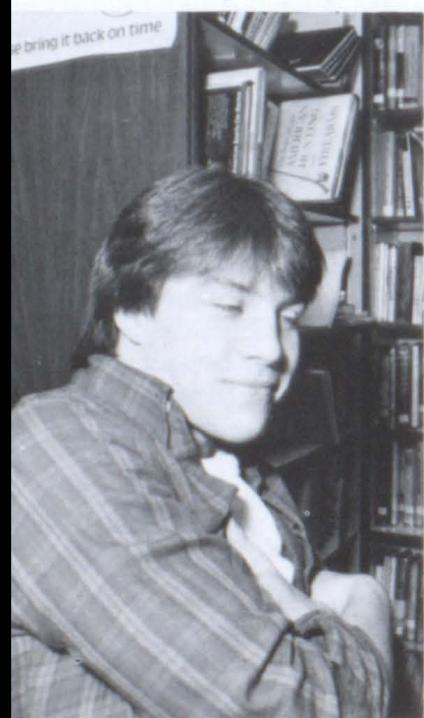

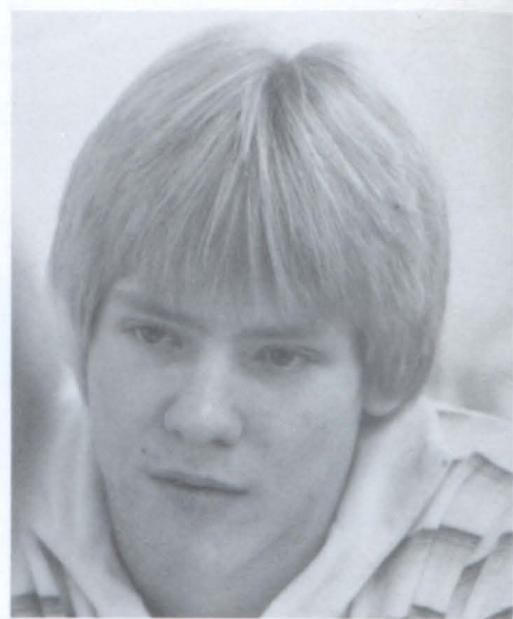

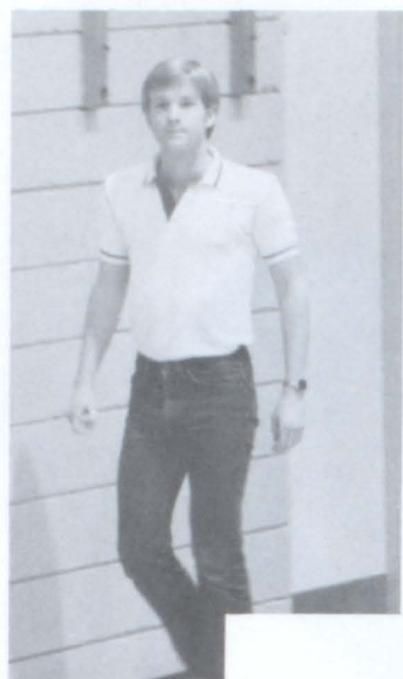

This summer I spent a week at my uncle's camp on Richardson Lake. It is very secluded. There was no running water and no form of electricity. The only way to illuminate the night was to use the gas-powered lamps. Now, the man who put up those lamps was either fearless or a fool; the latter, I think, is the most probable. The lamps were placed one at the front door entrance, another in the kitchen, and the last in the living room. This left the main hall of the huge house in almost complete darkness.

If you have never used old-fashioned gas lamps you have no idea what they do to you. The lamps give off a strange green glow that flickers across the floor like an armada of rats. So when the first bat swooped by we passed it off as a shadow. But when one darted in front of a lamp and simultaneously gave off a piercing shriek, I knew we had company.

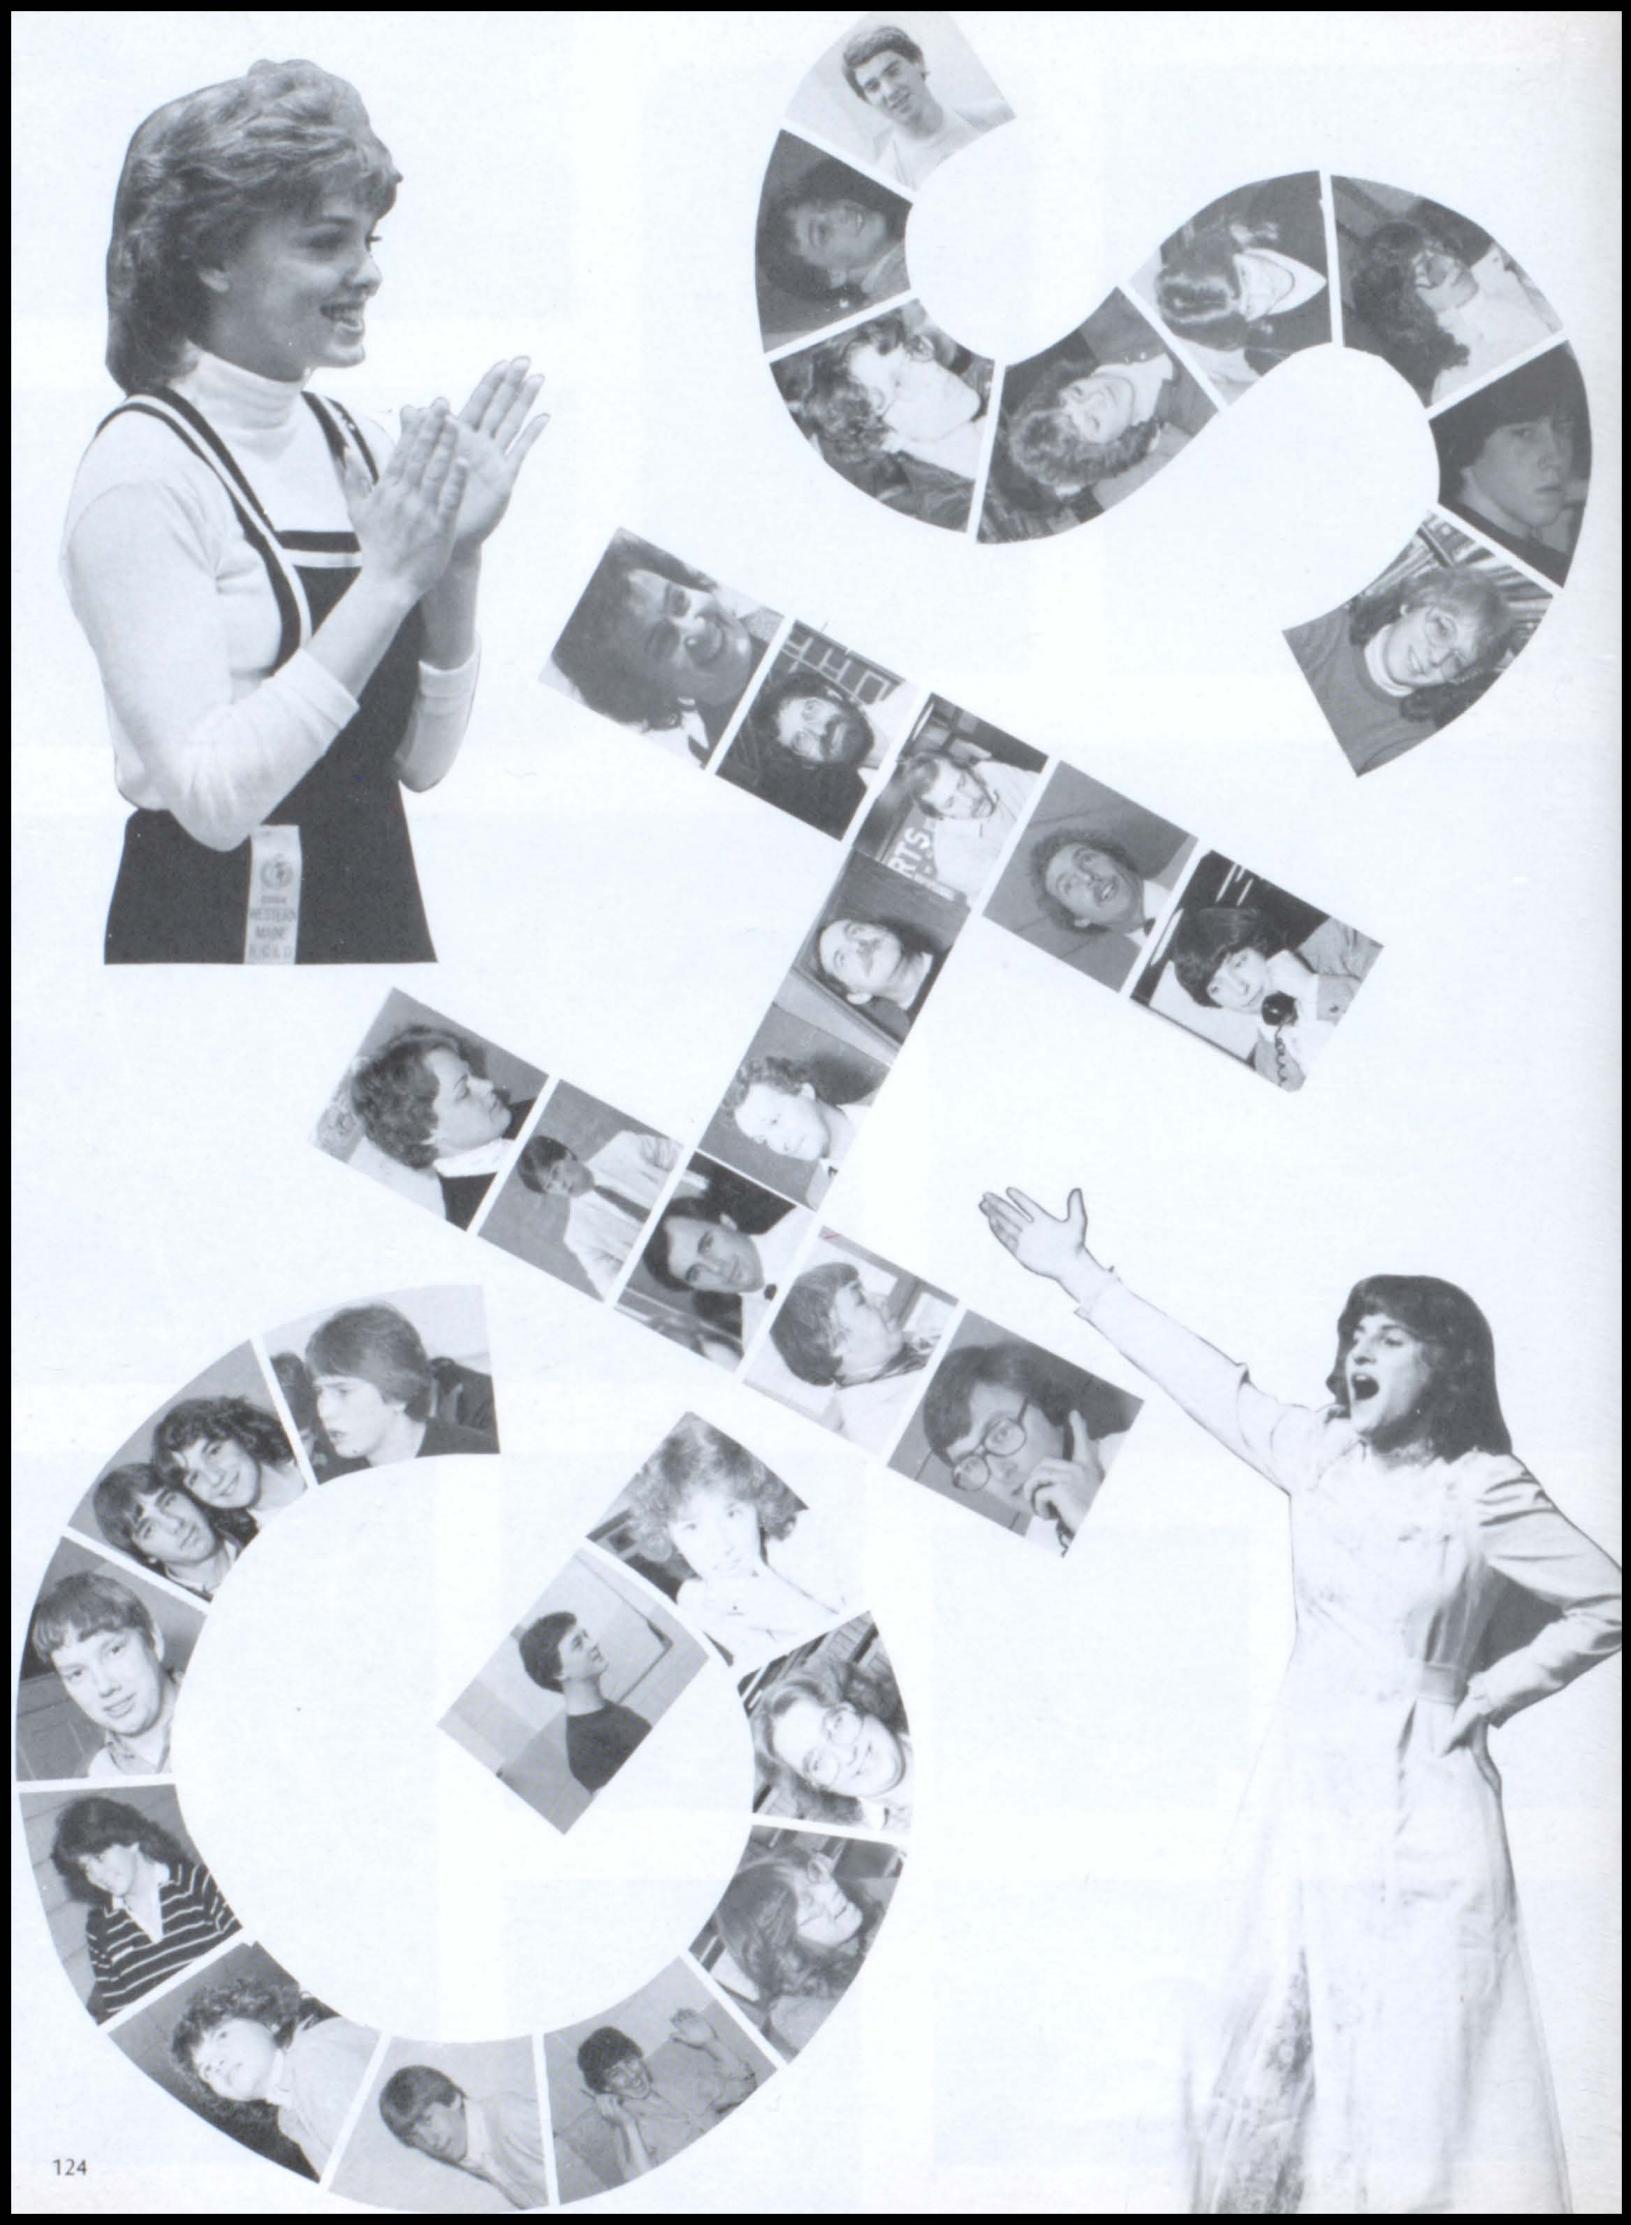

At first we thought it was funny. We laughed and ducked and laughed again. But the bats got braver and started swooping so close that we could almost feel their leathery wings. I was beginning to feel like a character in an Edgar Allan Poe story. Meanwhile Laya, my dog, and Tara, my sister, were hiding under the table. Brave souls that they are! My dad and I headed down the dark hall for our only weapon, a tennis racquet. On our return trip the bats' cries turned into laughter and I headed for the one safe place, the glassed-in porch that looked out over the lake. From there, Tara, Laya, and I had a great view of the floor show. My mother would point and my father would swing. Personally I thought it was all rather futile, but as the night progressed either Dad's swing got better or the bats got slower because the score at the end of the match was people -1, bats -0, and believe me, no one shook hands over the net.

Again this year the Gorham Varsity Soccer Team performed above and beyond. "1983" saw the Rams go to their fourth consecutive Western Maine Finals. With a great performance put in by all, the Rams were victorious over Cape Elizabeth with a 2-1 score. This gave the Rams their 3rd Western Maine title in the last four years.

Finally after rain delays and many practices, the Rams went on to the day that the team had been working towards since early August . . . The Class "A" State Championship. Eastern Maine won their first state "A" title. Gorham led twice and was never behind — until the last minute and a half, the Championship went to Waterville. Out classed or out played? Never!! The soccer cheerleaders are known for outstanding performance and overall excellence. They started the season by attending the ICF Cheerleading Camp in which they won many awards. Soccer practices started at 6:00 a.m. and often lasted 2-3 hours. With the money they earned from car washes and bake sales they bought supplies for hoops and new uniforms. Their biggest accomplishment was receiving a Spirit and Sportsmanship trophy and plaque. They would like to thank everyone for making it all so worthwhile.

The girls cross country team, coached by Steve Watts, had an active season. The hard, hot practices of endless miles of hill work paid off in the end, when they pulled together at the regional meet to place third out of eleven teams. This qualified the girls for the state meet. The freezing rain at Colby College and fear of hypothermia did not stop the girls determination in the state meet which capped an excellent season.

For a young team, the jayvees had a good season. Coached by Miss Watt, it proved to be a learning experience for the freshman and sophomores. With a record of 2-14 the girls learned that a good season is not necessarily a winning season. Hopefully next year, the team will put their knowledge together to form a strong base for future teams.

The freshman team also had a good season with a record of 3-1.

The freshman basketball team came on strong at the end of the season to post a 4-11 record. They pulled together to defeat Cape Elizabeth, the best team in the league. Gorham had a tough time with Windham, losing to them 3 times. Mark Hayes was the leading scorer, with an average of 16 points per game. Jim Anderson was strong on the boards. Many players improved during the season, namely Mike McDonald, Todd Walker and Dave Morrill. Plagued with injuries and sickness the team struggled through the season, but overall they had fun.

Girls spring track at G.H.S. has to be one of the strongest traditions in the state. The 1983 year saw the Gorham girls squeaking out their 4th straight state title.

The team was once again led by the outstanding Kent sisters, Alison and Lisa. Coach Titcomb saw some other new faces burst on the scene — Karla and Krista Butterfield chucking the spear, Carol Beale, Sandy Foss, Kelly Chellis, Allegra McNeally, Sharon Stevens — as well as the re-emergence of past stalwarts. Sandy McPhail, Janis Denehy, Joi Bell, Jo Mason, Colleen "Mad Dog" Gorman, and of course, Lori Broadhurst all make the right ingredients for a successful spring campaign. Thanks a lot girls for continuing the outstanding sports tradition at Gorham High School.

Despite not having a winning season, our season had many positive notes to it. We had the largest turn out in years which indicates that the real role of athletes was achieved. Several people achieved new standards and others performed extremely well in conference, regional and state meets. We lost some valuable players because of graduation, but expect new leaders to surface for next years team.

The 1983 Gorham Boys Tennis team finished third in the Triple-C, losing twice to both Cape and Falmouth. Jack Woodbury was a standout on the team remaining undefeated throughout the regular season.

The boys' team sent only Mark Woodbury to the state singles' tournament in Augusta. Mark got his chance at the Augusta tournament by going through three rounds at the local singles' tournament at So. Portland.

Most improved for the season went to Mike DiFillipo. In 1984 we look forward to great things from Jack Woodbury, John Cole, Jim Marean, Mike DiFillipo, and Gerald Gorman.

What Form?

The girls tennis team had an enjoyable season last spring. Although their team record was 2-7, team members made great personal gains in their individual tennis games. Team members playing singles were: Cynde Bangs-#1; Karen Mottershead-#2; Kim Cloudman-#3; Margo Burnham and Charlotte Edwards-#1 Doubles; Lucille Carter and Julie Dennis-#2 Doubles. Kathy Tewhey and Evelyn Roche played Junior Varsity.

We are looking forward to a successful '84 season.

“Where You’re Someone Special”

Here we are at the end of another yearbook . . .
another school year. We hope that you have enjoyed the book as well as the '83-'84 school year.

Education is so much more than facts of history or figures in physics. It's more than economic outlines or biblical literature. We have been provided with opportunities to learn these academic disciplines. We hope we can take advantage of them. We also hope that we have been provided with opportunities to grow personally, that through day to day contact, we have built a solid foundation; a foundation upon which we can now build our dreams.
