Dedication

The class of 1987 takes great pride in dedicating the '87 Schola to Mr. James Pearson. Mr. Pearson has brought friendship and knowledge to Gorham High School for 25 years. He teaches drafting, communications, and graphics with a degree of mastery. He has spent many hours printing supply's for the school and town but more recently working on curriculum development for the school system. More important than any of his materialistic work is his friendship we all know and respect. To thank you Mr. Pearson, we the class of 1987 dedicate this book to you and say thanks for all you have done.

I'm hoping that when we all meet again, years down the road, that none of us can say that we wasted our time. But instead that we strived to do our own thing, whether that means learning to fly, owning a business, or even something as simple as watching every sunrise. We have not wasted our time if we've spent our lives as we wanted to. And what better time to start reaching for those goals than now?

In addition to making the best use of our time, we should also try to sustain the attitude and feelings we have, as young people, through out our lives. For as hard as it is being young sometimes, and for taking a fair amount of criticism from the older generations, this is a special point in our lives.
